

Reference Guide to Saving Money on Prescriptions

Revised: April 2008

Prescription medications can be a heavy financial burden for individuals and families. Many people feel limited to receiving assistance from the well – known Medicare and Medicaid programs; however, there are other options that might be of assistance.

This Reference Guide is intended for use by patients, caregivers, health and social service providers, and others seeking to reduce out-of-pocket costs for medications. While certainly not an all-inclusive list, the Guide does offer a range of options, some for specific diseases or companies, some with more comprehensive information on many governmental and private programs, and some offering a discount on a broad array of products. The Guide will be updated from time to time, and is also posted on the Rice County website at www.co.rice.mn.us.

This publication is a cooperative effort of the HealthFinders Collaborative and the Rice County Public Health Nursing Service and is based on work initially done by Lindsay Hench and Maggie Roscher.
